Speaker: McKinney, Kara – Kara McKinney is the conservative host of the political opinion talk show Tipping Point which airs at 7pm PT/10pm ET every weeknight on One America News (OAN). She joined the company back in August of 2017 where she began first as a writer and then as a producer for the newsroom.

Kara is a native of the Southern California area having lived there her whole life. She is proud of the fact she did not attend University and instead went to community college where she earned associate degrees in Math and Science. Her great loves include politics, theology, history, science, linguistics and more. She remains in awe and is very thankful to God for the many opportunities He has given her.

You can follow Kara on social media, especially on twitter @Nefertari_25 or the show @tippingpointoan

Title: Looking Ahead: The Future of Conservatism

Outline:

1. Quick intro about myself and how God has worked through my life to bring me to this point
2. My observations about the state of conservatism among the youth including reasons for both cautious optimism and for pessimism in how far we have to go to recapture the culture
3. Call to Action about how conservatives can start getting smart on messaging. It can be hard for us to get through to young leftists because often they lack even the basic building blocks for a common ground upon which to reasonably debate and Proposed solutions.
